Erika is an associate in the Litigation Department of the firm's Boston office. Her practice focuses on commercial litigation, including complex commercial, environmental, employment and securities matters. Her experience further includes representing clients in bankruptcy matters, including Chapter 11 cases, as well as working with both borrowers and creditors in all aspects of complex insolvency proceedings.

Erika is also active in the firm's pro bono efforts, including representing clients in unemployment benefits appeals and in obtaining restraining orders for survivors of domestic violence.

Before joining the firm, Erika gained experience at a national litigation firm, where she worked on construction and real estate matters. She earned her J.D. from Northeastern University School of Law, where she was a member of the Black Law Students Association and participated in moot court.
